Surviving a day in the Jungle

Sponsored by Sherwin Williams & 3M

Marty Dewey, Training Center Manager is out of Chicago & Minneapolis He comes to us with 24 years of service with Sherwin Williams Automotive Finishes. He has 30 years in the Automotive Industry working in Collision Repair and Automotive Aftermarket Parts. His background includes Vo-Tech graduate, Collision Repair Technician, Collision Repair & Custom Painter and a Certified Technical Trainer (CTT).

This class is designed for the technician as well as the managers; we feel everyone can benefit from this class.

In today's jungle it is even more important that we address the following issues within our shops. We can all stand to improve communication between the office personnel and technicians. Why is this so important? Without positive attitudes and understanding what one another is doing we may not be running our shops at top efficiencies. You will learn about the lean process and how to make a positive change within the shop that will benefit both the technicians and managers. Technicians will learn how to look at the whole job not just repair process. So that the job is done right the first time which in turn impacts the cycle times. In today's jungle, customer service is even more important – why not go the extra mile to benefit the business which in turn positively affects our technicians, managers, & owners.
